One feels that for printing purposes, the fourth word might be changed to Damnation. I hope to God I am not going to be credited with the authorship of this.

There is a good deal of fuss here over Lord Halifax's speech in Toronto. It is the consid red opinion of the natives that the redcoats are going to take us over. This will be hotly resented in every city save Toronto, where they view the Union Jack with much the same feelings as [redacted] a high school girl viewing Herbert Marshall. The West would rather go down to destruction at the hands of the ape-men than submit to the hellish dictates of West Kensington.

Thank you for your nice telegram. I think the booklet may be useful as a reference, but little more. It bears the mark of money, which it was done for in the first place. I hope the brewers get some goodwill out of it: God knows they need it these days.

The cover is much too gaudy, and I am not sure that I care for the quality of the proof-reading. Take my advice: never let anybody else proof-read your stuff. Proof-read it yourself. The qualifications for a proof-reader in any Canadian printing concern are that he should have been born and educated in Mongolia, and that he should always be too drunk to work.

I hear you will be in town soon. I hope you will have lunch with me. We can talk over the Calgary sayings. I find it hard to recall any of them at the moment.

I can think of nothing interesting to tell you, save that the Junior Chamber of Commerce in these parts is planning a drive against prostitution. Isn't that wonderful? They will certainly know where to seek their prey. I think they will probably choose the same method of conversion which the late Rev. McDougall is said to have used on the Indian ladies. There is not a living soul in this country but has some plan to reform other people. The only refreshing soul I have encountered in the last few days is a gay housewife who is having affairs simultaneously with an airman and a physical education instructor. They met each other last week for the first time, and there some blows exchanged. She is very pleased over it all, and feels it may arouse some spark in her husband, who has been neglecting her. I heard about all this when she came in the office to get the fight kept out of the paper. Cogitating over her plight, I assured her that it was the most worthy
